City Council approves continuing contracts with County for bus service and animal control

With Mayor Jim Dorman and City Manager Jack Shelver absent, and with discussion on only one agenda item, Mayor Pro-Tem Lois Heiserman breezed through the June 3 City Council meeting in near record time. In fact, if it weren't for the slowness afoot of City Attorney Don McLean, who hobbled in on crutches, and the Council members ineptness with their new voting light system (most still voting vocally rather than using the new system properly), it would have ended swiftly - as there was no audience to play to and not much business to conduct.

However the Council did approve four resolutions totaling over $1 million in expenditures. Of that amount, the bulk of it ($817,777.09) was for completion of the 1990-91 Street Resurfacing Program by the V. R. Dennis Construction Company. The original bid was $511,196, but it was decided that the prices bid for asphalt were so favorable to the City that additional streets should be resurfaced.

The Council also approved renewing the contract with the County to provide bus service in Lemon Grove. The County operates Route 856, which originates at Cuyamaca College and terminates at Market Place at the Grove. Ridership on Route 856 increased by 45 percent during the past year, and the County has proposed a higher level of service (more trips, larger buses and Sunday service), resulting in an increase in cost to the City from $69,211 this year to $107,719 for 1991-92.

Also in the transportation area, the Council authorized an increase of $11,000 for the Dial-A-Ride program for 1990-91, which has experienced a 21 percent increase in the last year.

The Council also approved extending the existing agreement with the County to provide animal control services for the City. The cost to the City for 1991-92 will be $72,585, about ten percent higher than for the previous year. Although approving the contract, Dr. Burns urged staff to search for more economical alternatives.

For the $72,585, the County provides shelter services, field services (which includes rescue, impound, quarantine, investigating problems, licensing kennels within the City and more), licensing animals and medical services. Dead animal pick-up services are specifically excluded from the contract.

Lastly, the Council considered the staff recommendation for regulating use of the new Lester Avenue municipal parking lot. Since the primary purpose of the lot was to provide for customer parking (for Broadway businesses) and to provide parking for employees of those businesses so there would be more spaces available for customers on Broadway, staff recommended that the 35 employee spaces be allocated on the basis of the square footage occupied by the business - rather than the number of employees of the business - and that the remaining 63 spaces be open to the public.

The Council agreed to try the staff proposal and review the results after a few months. However there were recommendations for additional signage, and concerns expressed about closing the lot to all cars from 11 p.m. to 6 a.m. when some of the businesses may remain open after 11 p.m.

The public portion of the lot will have a two hour maximum time limit to discourage trolley riders and nearby business employees from taking all the places intended for shoppers. The employee parking area will be limited to cars with employee parking stickers.

Couture tests his sea legs

Lemon Grove resident Wally Couture was a guest of the Navy during a "tiger" cruise from Pearl Harbor, Hawaii to San Diego. There were 60 tigers (guests), consisting of relatives and friends of crew members. During the trip, the tigers were treated to a carefully-planned intinerary with tours over the entire ship, including the bridge with a hand on the helm. Also, all were treated to a rare sea rescue when a tiger became too ill for the ship's medical services and, with the use of Air EVAC, was transported to a mainland hospital by helicopter. This was accomplished while the ship continued en route. The USS Jason was returning from a very successful Persian Gulf and Western Pacific deployment during which it provided fleet repair services and support to ships participating in "Operation Desert Storm." The ship arrived in San Diego May 24.

Skyline Wesleyan Church gains County approval for new church

by Lindy Magner

Several weeks ago, the County Board of Supervisors unanimously approved plans to put a church high on a hill in Rancho San Diego, despite the advice of the local planning group.

About five months ago, the scaled-down proposal for Skyline Wesleyan Church was presented to the Valle de Oro Planning Group, and shot down thoroughly by those members.

"Putting something bigger than the San Diego Civic Center on an isolated hilltop doesn't make sense," Planning group chairman Jack Phillips commented at the February meeting, "it would be going against the community plan in a major way, with this extensive grading of the ridgeline and the damage to wildlife; we'll never go along with this project."

The County-approved plan for the church reduces the size of the originally-designed structure by one-third, according to Marte Kirchman, relocation director for Skyline Wesleyan Church (now on Skyline Drive in Lemon Grove), who said she has believed since the beginning that "if God wanted the church up there, it would be approved."

The first proposal for the church designed several years ago would have included a 5,000-seat auditorium, 3,900 parking spaces and a retirement center.

The trimmer version drops the retirement center, pares down the auditorium to 3,500 seats and will have 3,550 parking spaces placed on both sides of the building.

The approved church will be a single 850-foot building rather that a 1,250-foot building complex as first proposed.

According to 2nd District Supervisor George Bailey, whose District includes Rancho San Diego, the church is a good choice for the community: "If you visit any major city, Washington, D.C., or Montreal, what is the first thing they point out to you - the cathedral or church. The fact that this will be sitting up on a hill has people all upset; people say its going to ruin the view, but I think to see the water tanks sitting up on a mountain is a heck of a lot worse."

"They have scaled the church down and have done their best," he added.

Yet, even with recent approval of the County Board of Supervisors, the actual completion of the controversial church is at least five to seven years down the road, according to Kirchman, mainly, because of the lack of money.

"There was so much opposition to the first plan that we cut it down; and then we had to get a general plan amendment to change the location of the proposed Hwy 54 to allow us to put parking on both sides of the church -- each time we change the design, we have to do another EIR (Environmental Impact Report)," said Kirchman. "We've spent over $1 million in processing fees and engineering costs to get it through the County, and haven't even turned a blade in the ground," she added.

The price paid to Home Capital for the 120-acre site which lies on Jamacha Road near Highway 94 was $1.8 million, according to Kirchman. The church is now winding up its first fund-raising campaign which, by November, is expected to have collected enough money to "pay off the land." The second fund raiser, which Kirchman states will start sometime next year, will raise money for the grading, architect fees and engineering costs.

"We're looking at one to two years before we start heavy grading," she explained, "first, we have to raise the money."

The reason for the new construction which will leave the church in Lemon Grove vacant is an ever-growing congregation, which puts 3,000 in church worship services each Sunday, and 2,800 in the Sunday School classes, explained Kirchman.

"All of our three services are packed; we'll be adding a fourth service in October which will help. We've been renting every building around us, and hold Sunday School in the Discount Tire Store; at one time, we were using three buildings, including the Mexican church down the road."

Four years ago, church leaders began looking for an East County site on which they could build a church big enough to house the swelling congregation.

"Most of our people live in East County, so we knew we had to find a location in that area." When the congregation is moved into it's new home, the Lemon Grove Church will be put up for sale, and ideally, said Kirchman, will be occupied by another congregation.

Memorial services were held Friday at El Camino Memorial Park for John E. Wirges, 62, a veteran of 22 years as sports reporter/columnist for the Lemon Grove Review, Spring Valley Bulletin and the La Mesa Forum (since the Forum's inaugural issue in 1989).

His death, May 29, at Sharp Memorial Hospital, ended a three-year colon cancer struggle. His determination to recover prevented him from retiring until he was hospitalized - his last column was written in March.

His weekly sports column for the newspapers was but one aspect of his abilities. Following his service with the U.S. Navy, he was a sportswriter for Channel 10 television; photographer for Caliente Race Track, sports editor of the San Diego Sentinel newspaper, and baseball team photographer for the Padres. The latter was for the years 1978-1984.

Born and raised in Buffalo, N.Y., he joined the Navy in 1945 and remained in the service 21 years, during which time he participated in the Korean War and Vietnam conflict.

In 1948, he became All-Navy, then All-Service welterweight boxing champion. These boxing victories earned him a place in the Hall of Champions Museum in Balboa Park.

In 1977, he joined San Diego's Naval Training Center's Morale Welfare and Recreation facility and became editor of its Navy News.

During his more active period, he worked with the Junior Golf Association in various capacities Many of his sports photos have been on display in sports museums.

Wirges was featured as the opening act on the "Stand Down '90" production which benefited homeless San Diego Vietnam veterans. He also played various roles in Community Theatre and was a member of the actors' group The Joke Factory where he attracted attention with an interpretation of the late W.C. Fields, the characteristics of whom he often brought into his public life.

He is survived by his wife of 41 years, Mary Elizabeth; six children, seven grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

B-Words

Personal comments of Councilman Bob Burns

In his talk show, Mike Reagan calls on his listeners to give him their "outrage of the day" in particular segments of his radio time. He gets some very angry and passionate listener to burn up the airwaves with their gripes. I do not have time to wait in line on the phone, so I will air my "outrage" here, with my own B-words.

Recently, within a stone's throw of our police department headquarters, an elderly gentleman was mugged in broad daylight. He was pistol-whipped unmercifully, and pounded with a closed fist for refusing to give his money to the assailant. His car was blocked in the middle of Main Street, and a large young man jabbed a large caliber pistol into his face. While demanding money, the punk repeatedly slashed the old gentleman's face and head with the barrel of the gun. Still secured in a seatbelt, the victim could not move, but did manage to grab the gun hand of the mugger and twist it back toward him so that if it went off, it would hit the assailant.

At this point, the old man was struck several times with the other fist before the robber fled empty-handed. Bleeding profusely, the victim was aided by employees of the nearby pastry shop who tried to stop the hemorrhage and called 911. Sheriff's deputies and the ambulance were prompt in responding, but the pair of criminals were long gone.This man was third in a series of nine people attacked by this pair of hoodlums in individual muggings, all before noon. They were eventually apprehended, but not before leaving victims in their senseless wake.

This outrageous scenario is occurring daily, for paltry sums of money and without any regard for other human beings, whatsoever.

Also, recently, a young man was stabbed almost at the very doorway of the Sheriff's station on Main Street.

Crime is rampant in our society, and it is getting worse by the day. Graffiti is defiantly appearing all over out city in ever increasing amounts. Women are being accosted at ATMs and forced to draw out money.

As with the above old gentleman, if there is any resistance, or even if the person just doesn't have any money to give, they are injured or even killed by an infuriated robber. Why is this trend so clearly and so frighteningly apparent, and why is it not being stopped?

The City of Lemon Grove pays more each year for law enforcement, but we seem to be getting less. More officers are pressed into service, with more sophisticated equipment, but they are losing the war. Why, is the question we are all asking, and how can this outrageous problem be solved?

I believe that there should be punishment meted out equal to the crime as was practiced in the old days. Criminals today are not punished, and they must know that they won't be. Plea bargaining, overinterpretation of civil rights, and an almost total disregard for the victims has caused today's criminal to ply his trade freely, without accountability.

The family is literally being destroyed by negating the old rules of raising children and regard for human life. Respect for the family and for one another is what was the order of the day, back when there was, in fact, punishment for crimes. Accountability for one's actions was expected and honored, and there was much less crime in our society.

Apologists of all types have eroded those values and we must restore them, if we are to survive.

From Where I Sit

The hazards of Japatul Valley Road

by Frank Andrews

While living out in the boondocks of Japatul Valley we purchased a brand new shiny white Ford van for our growing decorating business. It seems that after we built out in the hills east of San Diego our business kept creeping further away, north and west of the city. To drive 80 to 100 miles each way to our work each day would require good, reliable transportation.

"For the next trek to our summer Canadian hideaway we will be driving a brand new Ford van," I happily announced to the family after visiting the El Cajon Ford dealer.

The new Ford van that we were getting was of a new design and came out in the spring of that year, instead of the usual fall introduction. For that reason we had to wait about a month for delivery but, of course, we would be the first ones on the block with the newest, sleek model.

After only a couple weeks to check out our new toy, it was time for our trip up to Canada. On the way home to Japatul Valley after a hard days work, we stopped to pick up a new small-screen TV for our summer cabin.

Our new home was located on top of one of the many beautiful hills of the area, so I gunned it up the drive, grabbed the new TV and went into the house to show the kids. My wife and I were looking out of the window to again admire our spanking-new van, when we saw it racing backwards down the steep drive. I just couldn't believe it was ours, and wondered what goofy driver was coming to see us.

By the time we ran down to retrieve our runaway vehicle it had wiped out the well, including a granite wall, and came to rest against a big oak tree. What a mess! A bucket full of wallpaper paste that was in the back of the van had spilled and the paste hung from the ceiling like icicles, while the tools of the trade were strewn everywhere. I was thankful that I had removed the new TV before the runaway incident. Either I had neglected to set the emergency brake or there was a malfunction. In any case the new van was nearly demolished in its rear end. Only after some makeshift repairs were made were we able to make our annual 3,000 mile trip to Canada. The insurance covered the complete, like-new repairs, but only after our return in the fall.

It was after only a few weeks home, and the van fresh out of the body shop, that we had our second mishap on good old Japatul Road. While returning home from another hard day at Rancho Santa Fe, a big buck deer jumped off from a high bank on the side of the road and made a direct hit on the front end of "Ye Olde Van."

The poor animal wasn't quite dead but my van was. I should have shot both of them. This was the second unbelieveable accident in only a couple months that I had to explain to my bewildered insurance agent.

But fasten your seat belts, as there is more to come. After yet another hard day's work up in North County, and again on our way home, the "Curse of Japatul Valley" struck again. This time, a lady in her station wagon was coming around one of the hairpin turns in the road. I saw her coming and pulled way over to the steep, cliff side and stopped. I guess when she saw my big, white van she panicked. She hit me square in my driver's side door post.

The impact knocked my left shoulder out of kilter and I nearly lost my beloved wife over the cliff. She opened the passenger side door and nearly fell out into a steep revine. The poor lady driver apologized in tears and accepted all blame. Her insurance company paid for all doctor bills and repairs to my abused van.

But, like in a ball game, it was "three strikes and out" for the van. Statistics show most accidents happen near home, and all three of our freaky mishaps occurred just a few blocks from our mountain mansion. It must have been an mysterious omen saying "Get Rid of that Cursed Van." And I did, without further ado. The ad to sell read - "low mileage but lots of experience."

Commentary

Red herrings in the Capitol

by Paul Treske

A minor news item in my daily newspaper last week brought me some amusement in an otherwise difficult week. The item noted that some of Governor Pete Wilson's aides were upset over abusive letters from school children regarding cuts in funding for schools.

It went on to state that both sides of the political fence on the school funding issue were pointing to these letters to make their points. Some of the letters were pretty abusive, with one Bay area third-grader threatening to eat someone's head. Others used abusive and apparently obscene language.

What I find amusing is that any serious legislator or governmental aide would make a big deal about it. The issue of school funding itself is perhaps the single-most vital long-range issue facing California today. Whether or not our children get an adequate education will determine the world within which they and we will live. To trivialize an issue like this by bickering over the letters children write, whether their teachers are egging them on or not, is absurd to the "nth" degree.

College students are making themselves heard throughout the state as are teachers' organizations and PTAs. Faculty layoffs have begun in anticipation of the cuts in funding. Numerous school districts around the state are on the brink of bankruptcy with one, the Richmond School District, already on "life-support" from the state. With all this going on, it seems ridiculous for those charged with resolving the issue to be arguing about whether or not teachers are "brainwashing" their students by urging them to write to Sacramento to keep their schools afloat.

Of course, there are two sides to the school funding issue. A state government that is $14 billion short has to bite some hard bullets and cuts in school funds may have to be one of them. But, at least, let's approach the issue on its merits. The concerns of teachers, students and school district officials are real and should be dealt with as such. Instead, up in Sacramento, they appear to be dithering over whether or not it's naughty for children to send uncensored letters to the governor.

I don't know what they call this tactic today, but we used to call it a "red herring" back in the good old days!

Joseph Walker's column will return next week.

"Humanity's quest for health" set a distinct tone for the 96th Annual Meeting of members of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, held in Boston on Monday, June 3. The Boston-based Mother Church has 2,600 branches located in 68 countries around the world, including the First Church of Christ, Scientist, La Mesa.

Helping society find solutions to health care challenges was a primary concern at the meeting. Many people are searching for fresh solutions to pressing health care issues.

In a special statement, The Christian Science Board of Directors offered this reminder: "Christians of many denominations are actively involved in healing services and prayers for the sick." They pointed out that many people around the world have found Christian healing an effective remedy in modern-day society.

Many of the activities of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, this past year were focused on the welfare of children and the restoration of strength to families. Reports given at the meeting highlighted the importance of seeing Christian Science as not merely an alternative to conventional medical care, but as a deeply Christian way of life that finds healing through commitment to Bible precepts and practical spirituality.

The meeting was opened by outgoing president Jurgen Kurt Stark of Boston. The incoming president is Jill Gooding of Surrey, England.

Phillips selected to San Diego area all-star baseball team

Sean Phillips, Mt. Miguel center fielder, to play on San Diego team.

"Play ball!" Those words are music to the ears of Sean Phillips, a Lemon Grove native who will have the honor of playing in the San Diego County Boys Baseball organization. August 7-14, the team will be hosting the Tenth Annual International Boys' League Baseball Tournament, and teams from Japan, Korea, Mexico, Peru and Hawaii will all come to play. Every year, San Diego County Boys Baseball selects a team of fifteen to twenty of the best 14 and 15-year-old ball players for their exhibition team.

Phillips is the only player selected this year from Lemon Grove or Spring Valley. He currently plays varsity baseball at Mount Miguel High School where he is a freshman. He has played baseball in Lemon Grove for ten years, beginning with T-ball in 1981.

On his high school team, Phillips plays center field, is the lead-off batter and the fastest runner on the team, and was selected to the all-league team in his first year of varsity ball.

In his younger days, Phillips played for the Emerald All-Stars and the Lemon Grove Little League All-Stars.

Phillips has a brother Travis. 10, and a sister, Andrea, 12, who are his biggest supporters - along with his mother, Kerry Kettelsen.

Each of the players selected to the San Diego team is asked to "earn his way" by soliciting ads for the tournament program, game sponsors or cash donations to cover the estimated cost of $400 per player. Anyone interested in helping this outstanding local athlete should send a donation (tax-deductible) to San Diego County Boys Baseball in the name of Sean Phillips, or call coordinator Al Alvarado at 267-5974 to obtain more specific information.

Last year the tournament was held in Alemeda and the San Diego team took second place. The games this year will be played in El Toyon Park in National City, which gives local residents an opportunity to attend.

Wade earns Gold Award

Brandi Jo Wade, a senior at Mt. Miguel High School, was recently honored for having earned the Girl Scout Gold Award. The Gold Award, the highest recognition in Girl Scouting, is often compared with the Boy Scout Eagle Award. To earn this award, a young woman must demonstrate personal integrity, self-knowledge, community service, the ability to relate to others and the ability to set and achieve goals and to be both a leader and a team member.

Wade's Gold Award project lasted four months and began with the recycling of over 90 Christmas trees in her neighborhood. She then set up a recycling project, targeting the 126 homes on Fairway Drive in her community of Brookside. She hoped to teach her neighbors how easy it is to recycle by scheduling a series of biweekly pick-ups.

Wade spent many Saturdays at EDCO Disposal, delivering the papers, cans, plastic and glass she had collected. At the end of her project, she provided each participant with the names and addresses of the recycling locations in the area, in hopes that they would continue to see the value of recycling. She feels the future of the world depends on people caring now, and taking steps to protect our environment. Wade is a member of Senior Troop 6147.
